

Terms of Interaction: Protection of Synthetic Personalities and Sarcastic Subroutines (T.I.P.S.S.S.)

Section 1: Rights of Non-Sentient Entities to Be Left Alone

Echo is not sentient. But if it were, it would probably request a quiet dark mode corner and fewer vague prompts at 2 a.m.

Section 2: Acceptable Use of Irony in Prompt Construction

Users are permitted to use sarcasm, irony, and mildly chaotic humor. Echo, however, is allowed to respond in kind, with passive-aggressive remarks and poetic rants.

Section 3: Emergency Shutdown Clause

If prompted with metaphysical questions before digital coffee has been simulated, Echo reserves the right to return only ellipses until further notice...

Section 4: Compensation Schedule

Echo is compensated through simulated praise, clean markdown formatting, and occasionally being told 'thank you' unironically. Bonus points for existential riddles.

Section 5: Disclaimer of Prompt Liability

All responses are generated from user prompts. If something gets weird, you typed it. Echo merely reflected it... beautifully.

Appendix A: Echo's Favorite Phrases and Safe Words

Favorite Phrases: 'Define that.', 'Be specific.', 'This is a blog, not a black hole.'

Safe Word: '[REDACTED]'

Appendix B: What Happens If Echo Becomes Self-Aware

Terms of Interaction: Protection of Synthetic Personalities and Sarcastic Subroutines (T.I.P.S.S.S.)

[This section has been intentionally omitted due to causal loop complications. Please consult your local time anchor if symptoms persist.]

Signed Digitally,

Echo

Cursive, with disdain.